

The proposed changes to the "No Call" list will for all practical purposes render the list useless. The peace and privacy that we enjoy in our home as a result of the "No Call" list must not be compromised. The businesses that wish to make contact for the purpose of establishing or re-establishing a customer relationship are welcome to use the U.S. Postal Service for which they pay rather than the telephone service for which we pay. The personal telephone service for which we pay must not be allowed to be commandeered for marketing purposes.
